Twenty Suspected Men Detained There as a Precaution Against Contagion.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Nov. 29.—As a precaution about twenty men working on Poplar Island have been quarantined. Two got off this morning and the police are now searching for them. Poplar Island, about a mile below the city on the north arm of the Fraser, is Westminster isolation station for contagious diseases.

The case of McLean Bros. vs. the municipality of Richmond, which has been before Justice McCreight and a jury for two days, was finished yesterday, a verdict being given for the plaintiff in the amount of their claim, $4,970 27, and $1,095 damages. Several points of law of great importance regarding contractors dealing with municipalities were reserved for argument.

LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.

The August Body Tells Poney Moore That Charley Mitchell Must Go.

The Notorious Bruiser Not to be Employed For a Year—Gen. Grabb's Portrait.

Georgia Judges Can No Longer Commit For Contempt—Another Wildcat Society.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The licensing committee of the London County Council has compelled George Washington Moore, better known as Poney Moore, the well known minstrel, and manager of the Moore & Burgess troupe, to dispense with the services of his son-in-law, Charley Mitchell, the blow-hard pugilist, as a prerequisite to the issue of a music and dancing license for Moore's Washington Music Hall in Battersea, and of which Mitchell has been manager up to a week ago. Moore protested that Mitchell had three children and that it was pretty hard to be compelled to drive his son-in-law out of work, but the committee, led by Hon. Hood Barr, was obdurate, and Moore was compelled to sign the agreement that Mitchell would not be seen about his place for the next twelve months, before a vote on the renewal of the license was taken. Mitchell's appeal from the sentence of imprisonment passed on him for his brutal assault upon on aged, inoffensive pedestrian comes up next month at the Middlesex sessions, and both in pugilistic and legal circles the opinion is expressed that the conviction and sentence will be affirmed, and that Mitchell will have to break stones or pick oakum for a couple of months.

Theosophist Annie Besant.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The theosophists of this city are on the qui vive in anticipation of the arrival of Mrs. Annie Besant, who is on one of the transatlantic liners booked to reach port within the next twenty-four hours. She will be met at the dock by a delegation and escorted to her hotel. The ex associate of the late Charles Bradlaugh has been entrusted with the special mission of reviving the interest in affairs theosophical in this country. She believes that the far west offers the best field for her efforts as there is more money there and larger number of unsophisticated persons. She will spend the greater portion of the next six months in the territory between Seattle, Wash., and San Diego, Cal. The Theosophical Society has inaugurated a propagandist mission all over the world. Secretary Wahl being en route to India, and Miss Oakley to California. The funds are being "put up" by Mr. Wahl, whose enthusiasm happens to be backed with a big bank account and a steady income.

A Relic of Barbarism Removed.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—The state senate to-day issued a bill taking from the judges the power of imprisoning for contempt. The bill is intended to open the jail doors for Stephen Ryan, who has been locked up nearly a year for contempt of court. Ryan succeeded his father in business some years ago, and after a very rapid career, failed for over a million dollars. When the case got into court Judge Gober decided that Ryan had kept back $120,000 from his creditors, and sent him to jail for refusing to produce the missing assets. The judge has been re-elected for four years, and Ryan's friends are trying to obtain legislative relief for the young merchant. Many of Ryan's creditors are New Yorkers.

Hanged for Murder.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 29.—The execution of Willie Bell, the 15-year-old negro boy convicted of the murder of the deputy sheriff of Bibb county, took place this morning in the gaol yard. Bell appeared perfectly indifferent to his fate almost to the last moment.

Wm. Russell, driver of a butcher cart, was stopped on Georgia street yesterday afternoon by three boys, who were playing with a rifle. One of them named Godfrey pointed the weapon at him and fired. The bullet struck the rib over Russell's heart and so he escaped instant death. The boys say Russell asked them to hand him the rifle, and in doing so the charge went off. No arrest has been made.

Captain Tashiro and officers of the Japanese ship Kongo gave a grand reception last evening, which was attended by three hundred people, including the mayor and city council.

Boys at Mount Pleasant are making a habit of rifling clothing left in the vestries of churches during services.

Chipman, Morgan & Co., have a proposition before council to build a drydock to cost a million and a half provided the city give a $300,000 bonus.

The proposal for the city to guarantee the interest on the street railway debentures has been laid over for the present.

One of the main duties of the council seems to be the revision of the city charts, and a committee was appointed yesterday to do the annual tinkering.

The St. Andrew's Society holds a ball this evening.

THE DOMINION CAPITAL.

Gradual Reduction of the Tariff—The Abbotts —Retirement of Trudeau.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—The Citizen, Government organ, discussing the tariff, says editorially: "There is no reason to doubt that modifications will be made in the future as in the past as the need for them becomes plain. Almost every session statutes are adopted making dutiable goods free, and as the revenue permits, the process will be continued and the other articles pruned down.

Miss Abbott sails on Thursday to join her father on the continent. Sir John Abbott hopes that a winter in the south of Europe will restore his health. He will visit the Riviera and Naples and will spend a few weeks in Egypt.

Mr. Trudeau, deputy minister and chief engineer of railways and canals, retires to-morrow after nearly forty years of service. His superannuation allowance will be $3,800 a year. He will be succeeded by Mr. Collingwood Schrieber, general manager of government railways. A minute of the treasury board fixes Mr. Schrieber's salary at $6,000.

CANADIAN AFFAIRS IN BRITAIN.

Lord Aberdeen for Governor-General—Canadian Apples and Cattle.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Sir Charles Tupper has no intention of visiting Canada this year.

Nothing is known officially here respecting the report that Lord Stanley will retire before the expiration of his term of office, but it is regarded as very probable. In any case Lord Aberdeen, as stated a few months ago, will succeed him.

Canadian members of the council of the Imperial Institute, forming the governing body on behalf of the Dominion, met on Saturday to discuss preparations for the Canadian section. Strong hope is expressed that the other provinces which are now in arrears in arranging for exhibits will make an effort to follow the example of Ontario. British Columbia will get a good show ready for the formal opening by the Queen, early next May.

Liverpool advices say that Canadian apples are arriving in better condition, but the quality being inferior the prices are slightly lower. The best Baldwins, however, fetch from fourteen to sixteen shillings.

John Swan & Sons, Edinburgh, say that 700 Canadian cattle landed at Glasgow last week were allowed to be taken anywhere, but it is not known why this permission was given. The cargoes shortly due will be slaughtered.

NANAIMO NOTES.

Shooting at Union Sailors—A New Collier to Arrive—The Infantry, Etc.

NANAIMO, Nov. 29.—The social given in the Presbyterian Church last evening, in honor of the anniversary of the establishment of the church in Nanaimo, was largely attended. A pleasant evening was enjoyed.

H. A. Hamlin, local agent of the Coast Seamen's Union, claims that he in company with three other sailors, were fired on by the mate of the Glory of the Seas without provocation. He claims they went to the vessel to pay a friendly visit and were not aware that a non-union crew manned the ship until yesterday. The shots fired very fortunately struck none of them. The mate's version is that as he was on watch Sunday night, he saw three boats silently coming toward the ship, and when they were near two lay a little off and one came very quietly alongside the bow. The next he saw was a head coming up, and he immediately fired, making the man drop back in the boat. Capt. Freeman came out in his night clothes and together they began firing at the retreating boats. The captain says that during the afternoon the ship was visited by a man who he has reason to believe laid a rope over the bow, so that the party could climb up.

The Bawnmore, a steamer of 5000 tons burden, will arrive here next week, and will be engaged in the coal-carrying trade between this port and San Francisco.

Mr. G. Kennedy, of Wellington, had a narrow escape of an accident yesterday while driving into town. The heavy snow lately had broken the telephone wire and entangled it the legs of horse, cutting one severely. The wire was promptly repaired as soon as it was reported.

The stock holders of the French Syndicate at Northfield have settled their affairs in a satisfactory manner. The syndicate has been registered as an incorporated liability company. Mr. H. Simpson went to Victoria yesterday to carry out the necessary arrangements.

The infantry are working hard getting ready for the inspection next week. Last evening they had company drill under command of the new instructor, in the girls' school yard. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday there will be company and manual drill at 7:30. On Saturday at 3:30 skirmish drill, and on Sunday church parade at 11 o'clock.

The Y.M.C.A. next month will move from their present rooms into the Green block, where the rooms are larger and there is a fine concert hall. The book-keeping, drawing, grammar, and arithmetic class are in full swing, and next week Miss Wilson starts a class in club swinging.

Some hunters returning from Englishman's river report the Comox telegraph wire down in many places on account of falling dead timber.

The Victoria train ran into a heifer this morning, breaking one of its legs.

Murder, Otherwise Malpractice.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND.

Plan by Which Mr. Gladstone Proposes to Conquer the Hydra-Headed Difficulty.

It Aims to Divide Ireland into Provinces With a Senatorial Government.

Some of the Unpleasant Contingencies Possible from Irish Autonomy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The Times this morning prints a complete outline of what purports to be the plan Mr. Gladstone proposes to offer to the British House of Commons as a solution of the problem of Ireland's self-government, which has confronted the English government for so many years. The details as they are presented, the Times says, may be accepted as authentic. They were published on Monday in the Baltimore Sun as the views of a leading thinker. The Times has received assurance that they are Mr. Gladstone's ideas, and that he will submit them in the Home Rule bill which he is now framing. This assurance comes through a letter written by a gentleman who is very close to the prime minister, and the arguments to sustain it are substantially as follows:

The right of Ireland to Home Rule has been admitted by all political parties, and is indeed based upon the fundamental principle of the British constitution. But what is right may not always be expedient. This is the only solid ground of opposition to Home Rule. The alleged inexpediencies of Home Rule for Ireland are:

First—That a parliament elected from the whole of Ireland would dominate Ulster in an intolerable manner.

Second—That an Irish parliament would be the tool of the Roman Catholic hierarchy and would be intolerable to the Protestants of Ireland.

Third—That an Irish parliament would confiscate the property of the large land owners.

Fourth—That an Irish parliament would mean the creation of a hostile and dangerous enemy on the very coasts of Great Britain.

Fifth—That any contribution to the imperial exchequer would soon be regarded as an intolerable tribute.

Sixth—That the relations of Ireland and Great Britain have become so complex and innumerable by long continued fusion of families and business affairs between the two countries, that it will surpass the art of man to dissever the nations in any just and practicable manner.

That these are serious difficulties must be conceded by every calm observer. That they are insuperable is not so manifest. Indeed, it seems possible to frame a measure of Home Rule that will surmount them all. For example, let the measure make of Ireland a dominion, divided into four provinces, viz., Ulster, Munster, Connaught and Leinster. Let each province have its own House of Representatives, elected by manhood suffrage and equal electoral districts, and let each House of Representatives elect a number (proportioned to the population of the province) of life senators to meet in Dublin and there constitute an Irish senate. Let each province have a governor appointed by the Crown, and let the governor of Leinster also be the president of the Irish senate. Let all the acts of a provincial parliament have the full power of the government of an American state, and let the Irish senate have the full powers of the United States Government with the following limitations:

a. No armed forces, fortresses, arsenals or ships of war to be created or maintained other than such as may be created by the senatorial Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland.

b. No relations with foreign powers to be established except as arranged by the Imperial Parliament.

c. No taxes to be imposed upon commerce between Ireland and any other British country.

d. No legislation by either senate or provincial parliament to take place in violation of personal liberty or personal religious belief and the security of private property.

e. The constitutionality or otherwise of any legislation, whether by the Irish senate, or any provincial parliament, to be subject to the adjudication of the judicial committee of the privy council.

f. The sovereignty of the crown to be maintained, and any decision of the crown-in-council to be enforced by warrant addressed to the governor of the province.

g. Let Ireland be represented in the Imperial parliament by say eighty members, twenty being elected by the people of each province.

This measure of Home Rule would dispose of the before mentioned objections.

Death of Dr. Scott.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Dr. Scott is extremely low this morning. He grows gradually weaker and lies most of the time in a semi stupor. At noon he was rapidly sinking and all the members of the family, including grand-children, and with the exception of his only son, Judge Scott, who resides in Port Townsend, Wash., were gathered around the bedside. The dying man is in a comatose condition and recognizes nobody. President Harrison is in close attendance. The White House has been closed to visitors, and the usual cabinet meeting intermitted.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Dr. Scott father-in-law of President Harrison, died to-day, aged 82.

CANADIAN NOTES.

News by Mail and Wire from all Parts of the Dominion.

The argument in the Manitoba school case cannot take place for a month, owing to the necessity of serving documents on the provincial government.

John Pearson, a prominent Toronto real estate man, died suddenly on Monday in his office. He was 40 years of age. The cause of death was heart disease.

The cotton combine, which combines all the colored cotton mills in the Dominion except the Parks mill at St. John, N.B., is negotiating for the purchase of the latter to make the combine complete.

John J. Robson, of Newcastle, has been stricken with paralysis and his recovery is hopeless. He was reeve of Newcastle for 30 years and warden of Northumberland and Durham for a number of terms.

Frank Beard, Sir John Abbott's secretary, has returned to Ottawa. He says Mr. Abbott is greatly improved in health, but will winter in the south of Europe or Egypt. He hopes for complete restoration to health.

At a meeting of the South Norfolk Reform Association held at Simcoe on Saturday evening, the members present, with the exception of three, declared themselves in favor of the political union of Canada with the United States.

Montreal newspapers state that in well-informed circles it is considered settled that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will get the Government contract for the fast Atlantic mail service, and that a line will probably be established next summer.

A shooting accident occurred at Killarney, Man. Samuel Arscott and Willie Killoway, aged 9 and 11 respectively, were playing with a gun. The former was looking into the gun barrel, when Willie pulled the trigger, not knowing it was loaded. The gun went off, blowing the top of Samuel's head off and killing him instantly.

Mr. Mendenhall, of the U. S. coast and geodetic survey, has been in Ottawa consulting with Mr. King, of the Interior Department, regarding the exact boundary line between Alaska and the Canadian possessions. It is expected that the work will be finished shortly. Mr. Mendenhall has gone to Washington, returning as soon as the authorities act upon the drafts agreed upon by the two engineers.

Last week a party of Danes landed at Halifax from Europe and were stopped by the U. S. quarantine officers at Vanceboro and sent back to St. John, N.B., where they are now being looked after by the Intercolonial Railway officials. Monday another batch of immigrants, booked for the Western States, reached Halifax. The railway people refused to forward them unless they had guarantees that they would pass the frontier at Vanceboro. These could not be given, as the local health association have no machinery to fumigate immigrants or their baggage. Consequently the unfortunate foreigners remain at the railway sheds in Halifax. The process of fumigation at Halifax is regarded as a mere matter of form if not a farce.

An Ottawa dispatch gives this forecast of the new Cabinet: The act creating a department of trade and commerce, and sub-departments of customs and internal revenue, and also a solicitor-generalship, will be proclaimed. The act, passed six years ago, was never in operation. Its effect will be to wipe the department of finance out of existence. Hon. Mr. Foster will become Minister of Trade. For the three under-secretaryships mentioned, which do not carry Cabinet rank, Messrs. Clarke Wallace, John Wood and Desire Girouard, of Jacques Cartier, are the prime favorites. As to the remainder of the portfolios little change will be made in the men, but the offices will be shuffled round. Hon. Mr. Angers will come in Mr. Chapleau's place, and Mr. Ives in Mr. Abbott's place.

The Globe's Ottawa correspondent, discussing the probable composition of the new Cabinet, says it is an absolute necessity that Sir John Thompson's place as Minister of Justice should be filled by an Ontario man of high standing and great ability, and it is hinted that overtures have been made to Christopher Robinson. He adds, however, that that gentleman is known to be wedded to his legal practice, and that it is doubtful if a man who would not accept a seat on the bench would enter the Cabinet. The Mail comments editorially on the change of Premiership. Sir John Abbott, it says, was not a brilliant and theatrical Premier, but, added to his legal knowledge, he had a marked capacity for business and a great deal of sound common sense. With this equipment he was able to keep his forces well in order, and pass the Parliamentary party over to his successor in as good a shape as that in which he found it. As to the elevation of Sir John Thompson to the leadership the Mail says it will not be universally applauded other than by those who acknowledge the party badge which he wears. His conduct will be jealously watched, and he will be constantly in danger of precipitating defections. Many Conservatives would accept from Sir John Macdonald what they will agree to at the request of no other man. At this moment the Manitoba question looms up to try the strength of the new Premier and the degree of attachment of his party to him. One false step would bring his Government down.

Gould Going South.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Jay Gould is preparing to escape the rigors of a New York winter by making another of his trips to the southwest. It was reported in Wall street yesterday that he had ordered his private car to be made ready and that in a day or two he would start for Texas and the Mexican border, accompanied by Miss Helen Gould and his son Howard. Inquiry at Mr. Gould's house in Fifth avenue failed to elicit any information about the exact time of his departure, but it was said he was in his usual good health.

GERMANY'S POSITION.

Vast Subsidies For the Army Will be Asked in the Reichstag.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—The opening of the Imperial Diet on Tuesday is probably the signal for general agitation throughout Germany. There has been a great agitation for months with Bismarck at the head of it. What the Reichsrath will really do to give expression to the feelings of the country is the question that stirs all German breasts. The first two sittings supplied a sensation of their own. The Emperor's speech and the Chancellor's speech were both of the most serious kind. There has been a dispute as to whether the Emperor, who is a soldier before all things, would assent to a reduction of the service in consideration of the large increase proposed in the effective force of the standing army. It is very likely that he hesitated at first, but his adhesion to the move is now completed. He advocates this increase on the only possible plea, namely, the danger to Germany from the growing military strength of France and Russia. He names neither of those powers. There is no word of offense or menace to anybody, though he has chosen a curious phrase when he alleges that the duty of Germany to augment her military forces has become imperative because of the development of the "repressive" power of other European states. The French are quick to infer that Germany would attack them if France had not grown too strong; an inference which the Chancellor dispels. Caprivi's speech on Wednesday last was from every point of view remarkable. It was able enough to furnish of itself a good answer to Prince Bismarck's taunts at his successor's incapacity; able, not merely as a speech, but in its broad views of affairs, and in its vigorous handling of the great issues. There was a note of true statesmanship in his refusal to appeal to a panic in order to carry his bill. He would not as he said, jingle his sword. He declined to say that war was in sight.

When the debate on the Imperial budget opens in the reichstag, Wednesday next, some indication will be given as to the manner in which the parties are likely to range themselves on the army bill. The army estimates, prepared independently of the increased expenditures involved through the new bill, amount to 585,000,000 marks, 12,500,000 marks over the amount contained in the last budget. There is almost a unanimous feeling among the members of the reichstag against proceeding with the army bill until the Government's financial projects connected with the measure are fully disclosed. The house will compel Chancellor Caprivi to make an explicit statement during the discussion of the general estimates. The Centrist and National Liberal organs predict that the army bill will be defeated on the first reading. Caprivi will resign within a fortnight, and the reichstag be dissolved. The Government officials are confident that none of these predictions will be fulfilled. It is said by the Centrist party that if the Government requires their support it can be brought about by the Chancellor agreeing not to oppose the Centrists' measure permitting the return of the Jesuits to Germany. Among the leading measures to be submitted to the reichstag is the emigration bill, which was first published last spring as a restrictive measure. This bill will aid the efforts of the American government to check undesirable immigration.

Gen. Grubb and the Painter.

BURLINGTON, Ky., Nov. 29.—The story circulated this morning that Gen. E. Burd Grubb, formerly minister to Spain, has had portraits of his mother painted at Madrid, for which he refused to pay, and that Borghun, a Danish painter who did the work, had brought suit through his counsel, Leon Abbett, jr., to recover $2500, created the most profound sensation in this vicinity, where the ex-minister makes his home. A correspondent of the Associated Press called at his handsome residence at Edgewood Park last night and asked for his version of the affair. He said: "Borghun, a young painter whom I met in Madrid, asking permission to paint the portrait of my mother, I assented, and showing him a portrait of my daughter Effie that had been painted in Paris at a cost of $250, told him I would like to have one just like it. This was what I reasonably expected, and I supposed the price would be the same." General Grubb says that he later on asked the painter what the cost would be and the answer was $2500, whereupon the General ordered the work stopped. Borghun finished two pictures of Miss Grubb, which he sent to the legation demanding pay for them. Gen. Grubb offered to leave the matter to arbitration, but the painter refused. Now comes the suit. Gen. Grubb declares that the whole affair is to be probed to the bottom.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT BEATEN.

The Chamber Passes a Vote of No Confidence and the Cabinet Resigns.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day, M. Brisson, chairman of the commission on the Panama investigation, demanded of the Government that an autopsy be held on the body of the late Baron Reinach. M. Ricard, minister of justice, replied that the law did not permit it. A division was taken not sustaining M. Ricard and the Government was defeated. The resignation of the ministry was at once announced. The cabinet came in power on February 28. It was as follows: M. Lorret, president of the council and minister of the interior; M. DeFreycinet, minister of war; M. Ribot, minister of foreign affairs; M. Bourgeois, minister of public instruction; M. Ricard, minister of justice and public worship; M. G. Cavagnac, minister of marine; M. Develle, minister of agriculture; M. Jules Roce, minister of commerce; M. Viele, minister of commerce and public works. The new Cabinet was coldly received. In his opening address, M. Loubet said: "The primary object of our policy will be defence of all the Republican laws. In the first rank among these we place the military law, the law of patriotism and equality, and the education laws—the source of all the developments of the national spirit and a fundamental guarantee of liberty of conscience. We shall continue firmly to apply them. We shall ask functionaries and those who hold in any way a portion of the public power to be not only faithfully devoted to their professional duty, but sincere servants of the Republican State." Notwithstanding these patriotic statements the cabinet from the first has had a most difficult task, being assailed by Extremists from both sections, although receiving the half-hearted support of the Moderates. The early downfall of the cabinet has seemed a foregone conclusion since the course of Premier Loubet in respect to the Carmaux strike; his vacillation during the strike, and his decision as arbitrator offended both the aristocrats and the Socialists and alarmed the substantial middle class, which is the chief support of the republic. The prosecution of the manager and beneficiaries of the Panama fiasco has displeased many, even of those who suffered by the Panama failure, but who were opposed to holding up to the world the spectacle of what might be regarded as a great national misfortune. Within the past few days events have ripened rapidly in the Panama affair, and there has been a growing feeling that the Government was deceiving the country, and the admission of M. Ricard that no seal had been placed on the papers of M. Reinach, although Baron Reinach was virtually under prosecution when he died, probably by suicide, excited both astonishment and disgust. Hence, when the Chamber met, there was a general disposition to exact more information from the Government regarding Reinach, who is supposed to have been the chief beneficiary of the alleged Panama mismanagement and of the vast sums contributed by Frenchmen to the undertaking. When questioned by M. Brisson, M. Ricard still showed a purpose to shield the Reinach estate, or at least to give no satisfactory assurance that the estate of the dead Baron would be made to disgorge should guilty complicity be established. When this became evident a majority of the Chamber declined longer to support the Government, and their defeat was followed by their resignation.

Catarrh, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not work and

Could Scarcely Walk,

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed closed and I could not swallow. The doctors said it was caused by heart failure, and gave medicine, which I took according to directions, but it did not seem to do me any good. My wife urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken two bottles I felt very much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling excellent. I thank God, and

At Death's Door

and my wife for my restoration to perfect health." HARVEY HEED, Laceyville, O.

Cubb's Cough Cure

ANTISEPTIC.

Do you know what an ANTISEPTIC is? We will tell you. It is a medicine or application which arrests decay or putrefaction and heals. The application of antiseptic preparations has made it possible for surgeons to do what was never dreamed of, because antiseptics stop all formation of corrupt matter. We do the same in our Cough Cure.

A Cough or other Lung Disease speedily causes decay. The best proof of this is the putrid phlegm which you spit up. Cubb's Cough Cure IMMEDIATELY arrests this decay and the cure follows with surprising rapidity. If you have a COUGH, or your child has whooping cough, ONE DOSE, or at most TWO will make you our friend.

A LIFE OF DEATH

Noble Sisters Leave for the Leper Colony.

San Francisco Call.]

Among the passengers of the steamer Australia, which left port to day for the Sandwich Islands, were three Franciscan Sisters, who were almost unnoticed as they walked up the gang plank, and very little unnecessary attention was paid them as they prepared to make themselves comfortable in their staterooms. Little was it thought that these three sisters were bound on a mission of charity from which almost everyone shrinks with horror. The remainder of their lives will be spent among the lepers of the little kingdom in the Pacific.

The names of these holy women are M. Jerome, M. de Sales and Mary Albini. All three are from Syracuse, N. Y., and they arrived in San Francisco on Monday last. Up to the time of sailing they were busy preparing for the voyage and visiting their few friends in the city.

The vast sisterhood of the Catholic Church are doing a noble work in charitable fields all over the world, and when the condition of the poor lepers of the Sandwich Islands became known these noble women at once took steps to alleviate the sufferers. They established schools and hospitals in Honolulu and adjoining localities with all speed, but their work increased rapidly and it was with difficulty that they kept pace with the demands made upon them. As a result of their efforts four commodious and well-equipped hospitals and the same number of schools stand as a monument, and in these institutions the inhabitants of the little islands afflicted with the terrible disease find all the comforts possible.

The city of Syracuse has played an important part in furnishing sisters for this noble cause. The pioneers of the work in Hawaii were from that city, when in 1883 six left for the new field of labor. A few years later they were joined by twelve from the same place, and now these go to devote their lives to smoothing off the rough edges of misery.

Sister M. Jerome was a Syracuse woman, and her name before she entered the religious life was Martha Brown. She was born in Germany, but her parents died when she was quite young and she went to Syracuse with an aunt, with whom she lived up to the time of entering St. Anthony's Convent in 1874. She took the solemn vows two years later, and since that time has been engaged as a nurse and teacher.

Sister de Sales has been in religious work for about eighteen years, and during that time has been a teacher in Utica, Albany, New York and Syracuse. She has done little nursing, devoting nearly her whole time to teaching, and was loved by all her pupils at the school of the Assumption in Syracuse, where she has been for several years.

The name of Sister Albini before she entered the religious work was Miriam Sluder. Her home was in St. Louis, and it was only a few years ago when she decided to work among the lepers of the Sandwich Islands. With this object in view she entered a convent and went to Syracuse to make special preparations for the work.

On arriving at Molokai, where their special field of labor is to be, these sisters will for the present devote their time to teaching the children of the lepers. They will have to undergo a course of training before they can do any nursing, and this work will be under the direct care of the pioneers who have charge of all of the institutions on the island devoted to this charity.

THE MINING LAW.

To the Editor:—In your paper of Saturday last you had a leader on the mining law as amended in 1892. In this article you claim that the miners themselves do not know what they want. Some men, it is true, are utterly incapable of judging what is good for them and would probably find some objection to any law made for them. The majority, however, are very much decided on what they want, and a careful enquiry by the member for West Kootenay, or some zealous newspaper correspondent anxious to do his best to help to right a great wrong, would quickly make known the miners' idea of a good working mineral act.

Having been in the heart of the Slocan, which is undoubtedly the centre of mining in Kootenay just now, I am able to give the miners' needs to anyone who cares to know them, though judging from the overpowering interest taken by Victorians in home mining, there will probably be very few who care a farthing what the miners want. To those few I beg to state the required alterations:

1. That mineral in place shall be a necessity before recording any claim.

2. That the dimensions of a mineral claim shall be 1500 feet long by 600 feet wide.

3. That three posts at least be placed on a claim—one at least to be on or near the ledge.

4. That a claim shall be blazed along the centre, or along each end line and each side line.

The question of a claim owner following all dips, spurs and angles on his lead is the only point where miners (I should say prospectors, possibly, for mine owners probably prefer following dips, etc.) differ.

The present law is an inducement for the unscrupulous to do crooked work, for proof of which watch the number of cases which will come up for trial in the near future. As I have said before in a Victoria paper, to put two stakes in a 52 acre patch on a mountain side in heavy brush, with no blazed line between them, and expect prospectors to find them short of a week's to six months' work is the acme of law-making absurdity, to say nothing of the chance it gives jumpers to accomplish their cowardly business.

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

To the Editor:—The other evening Alderman Styles put into words what many of us have of late been thinking: When will we have sewerage connections, and when will passengers cease to be vaccinated? To which, so your reporter notes, there was no answer from the council. This is somewhat surprising, for an answer is not far to seek, and as both questions deeply concern the welfare of the city, the aldermen should be, if they are not, more than interested in their solution.

If I may hazard a reply, it is this: When a more enlightened public opinion calls for the immediate completion of the sewerage system as of vital importance to the public health, and when it calls for free and untrammelled intercourse with our neighbors on both sides of the international line as of vital importance to the public pocket. The folly of putting a very large sum of money into the ground and leaving it there absolutely useless is so apparent that nothing need be said on that score. I shall therefore limit my remarks to the other question.

Whether vaccination is for good or evil is much disputed, and possibly a good deal can be said on both sides, but whether or not compulsory vaccination of passengers acts prejudicially on travel and business, admits of but one answer. It does. While there are comparatively few people who object to the operation on any terms, there are a large number who object to compulsion, especially when it means that they must be vaccinated by a doctor whom they do not know, and whose lymph may or may not be pure. Vaccination by one's family doctor is one thing, by the municipal officer whom one stumbles against on landing is quite another.

And what a farce is the certificate system. It is simply a premium upon lying, evasion and cheek. Dr. Duncan, who has a most difficult, disagreeable and altogether unenviable task to perform, stands at the door. A passenger presents to his gaze a piece of paper. Pass. How can Dr. Duncan tell that the man named on the certificate is the same as the passenger he sees? How can he tell whether the holder of the certificate has been successfully vaccinated or not; recent vaccination does not mean successful vaccination? Has he never heard of such a case as this:—A, who has really been vaccinated, obtains a certificate, at Seattle let us say, and hands it to his friend B, who, unvaccinated, a centre of contagion may be, straightway presents it at Victoria, and triumphantly passes, while C, too conscientious to descend to deceit, is ignominiously sent back, or equally ignominiously has put into his veins he knows not what, for—he knows not why.

The inspection Dr. Jones conducts, to see whether or not a passenger is actually suffering from smallpox, is reasonable and cannot be objected to by the most dyed-in-the-wool anti-vaccinator, but Dr. Duncan's vaccinations are utterly useless from any point of view. Suppose he does vaccinate a hapless man or woman here and there; if the operation does not result typically it has been of no avail, still the passenger has passed, has been lost sight of, and for all purposes of protection might as well be unvaccinated. And can this method act otherwise than as a powerful deterrent to travel?

To Victoria tourist travel is most important, but the stream is as yet comparatively small. What it may amount to in years to come, what it can be made by careful nursing, no one can estimate. But the tourist is timid. He may be vaccinated and revaccinated, but he will argue that where there is so much smoke there must be fire. So he will conclude that Victoria is a very good place to keep away from, and accordingly he will avoid our city, and visit neighboring towns where there exists no medical despotism, and where the medical dirty linen is washed in private.

This is no fancy picture. A somewhat extensive journeying to and fro on the face of the earth has taught me this, if it has taught me nothing else: that even very light restrictions are quite sufficient to divert the stream of business to other and more congenial channels, and that the action of any one city, be it ever so important, has not the slightest influence upon the world. The world, if it is not entirely suited, simply passes it by.

Medicus.

There are some patent medicines that are more marvellous than a dozen doctor's prescriptions, but they're not those that profess to cure everything.

Everybody, now and then, feels "run down," "played out." They've the will, but no power to generate vitality. They're not sick enough to call a doctor, but just too sick to be well. That's where the right kind of a patent medicine comes in, and does for a dollar what the doctor wouldn't do for less than five or ten. We put in our claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

We claim it to be an unequalled remedy to purify the blood and invigorate the liver. We claim it to be lasting in its effects, creating an appetite, purifying the blood, and preventing Bilious, Typhoid and Malarial fevers if taken in time. The time to take it is when you first feel the signs of weariness and weakness. The time to take it, on general principles, is NOW.

Notice.

Our manufacturing and repairing departments will be in full operation during the term of our auction sale the same as usual. Remember we are not going out of business, but have to raise an amount of money by January 1st. All work guaranteed. Jackson & Mylius. *

THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.

My wandering soul is satisfied;
I rest where blooming islands ride
At anchor on the tranquil tide.

The sky of summer shines serene,
And sapphire rivers flow between
The thousand bosky shields of green.

I know the tale the rod man sung—
How, when this Northern land was young
And by a smiling heaven o'erhung,

Its beauty stirred the archfiend's ire,
Till, burning with insane desire,
He smote it with a shaft of fire

And shattered it to fragments. "See!"
He cried with diabolic glee,
"The paradise that mocked at me!

"'Tis sunk beneath the wave! No trace
Reminds me of its native grace
And witchery of loveliness."

But Time repairs the wreck of old,
And veils, with touches manifold,
The shining shards with green and gold.

The sad wounds hide in tender moss,
And ferns and lichens creep across,
And every ragged scar emboss.

The pine its coronal uprears,
And banished beauty reappears
'Neath the caresses of the years.

The fairy-land again has grown;
The Huron god has found a throne,
And Manito reclaims his own.

And so the summer shines serene,
And sapphire rivers lapse between
The thousand bosky shields of green.

And so I drift in silence where Young Echo, from her granite chair,
Flings music on the mellow air.

O'er rock and rush, o'er wave and brake,
Until her phantom carols wake
The voices of the Island Lake.

Beneath my skiff the long grass slides;
The muskallonge in covert hides,
And pickerel flash their gleaming sides.

And purple vines the naiads wore,
A-tiptop on the liquid floor,
Nod welcome to my pulsing oar.

The shadow of the waves I see,
Whose silver meshes seem to be
The love-web of Penelope.

It shimmers on the yellow sands,
And while, beneath the weaver's hands
It creeps abroad in throbbing strands

The braided sunbeams softly shift,
And unseen fingers, flashing swift,
Unravel all the golden weft.

So, day by day, I drift and dream
Among the Thousand Isles, that seem
The crown of glory of the stream.

A Legitimate Comparison.

Certainly it is legitimate to draw comparisons and contrasts between the glory, power, and objects of the temple of Diana, and the intenser glory, greater power, and holier objects of the Church of Christ. The early Christians in Ephesus must often have thought about them: The inanimate goddess, the ever-living, personal Christ; the hidden idol, the all-revealed and all-revealing Immanuel; the mystery of the cella, the living mystery of the indwelling Christ; the falling foundations of the temple; the immovable foundations of the church; the center of sin; the temple consecrated to the beauty of holiness; the coldness and statliness of the heathen shrine, the Christian church, a "household" full of warmth and cheer. Both fitly and beautifully framed; both visions of strength and loveliness; both offering asylum on certain conditions to certain classes of men. But the one belonged to the realm of matter and satisfied only the human sense of beauty and power. The other represents the boundless and glorious spirit, the "heavenly places" with their "spiritual blessing," the peace of God—the all-satisfying portion of the soul forever.—Bishop John H. Vincent.

Not the Only Head Turned by Flattery.

Queer stories are told of the conduct of Prince Nicholas of Montenegro, whose head seems to have been turned by the compliment which the Czar paid him some years ago in calling him "his only friend." Since then his disposition has become more and more tyrannical. He will not endure, it is reported, the slightest opposition to his wishes, and is particularly hostile to such of his subjects as evince any interest in questions of reform. Many of the best men in the country have been driven into exile by his persecution. These include Masha Vrbica, a former Premier and War Minister, who has become a naturalized Austrian and settled in Bosnia; the poet Laza Kostics, Drs. Yovanovics and Simonovics, the novelist Mativouly, Savakosanovics, formerly Metropolitan of Bosnia when it was under Turkish rule, and his own cousin and aid-de-camp, Blasho Petrovics, whose wife he publicly insulted. The Prince devotes all his attention to military matters. He is convinced that a general European war is imminent, and hopes to be able to enlarge his kingdom in the general scramble for territory.

Mars in Poetry.

Longfellow was an admirer of the planet Mars. He wrote in his poem, "The Light of Stars," these lines:

"There is no light in earth and heaven
But the cold light of stars,
And the first watch of night is given
To the red planet Mars.

And earnest thoughts within me rise
When I behold afar,
Suspended on the evening skies,
The shield of that red star."

The poem is one of the most beautiful of Longfellow's short poems. The "earnest thoughts" have been inspired in other souls by a study of the "red star" to which the poet gave "the first watch of the night."

The Return to Race.

We commonly call life the years that lie between that vague and unremembered moment of birth and that incredible and distant moment of death. This is but a kind of convention, for really what we mean by our life is that which is conscious and individual. If we do not mean this individual period we may logically count our life as beginning in past generations of our kin, and if we do mean the individual period we are not quite logical in counting as part of our life those latter years in which we return to our race and are less ourselves than our race.

Members of a family resemble each other physically as they enter middle life, and still more as they approach old age; and this will apply not only to brothers and sisters, but to cousins and distant relatives. Who, indeed, has not remarked the curiously close resemblance borne by members of a family to each other in death, when, the individual

CITY HEALTH NOTICE

THE ACTING MEDICAL HEALTH OFficer for the City of Victoria recommends that all citizens be required to thoroughly clean up their premises, removing all garbage heaps, decaying vegetables, stable manure, and night soil, and disinfecting all closets and drains as often as necessary, and generally to comply with the provisions of the "Consolidated Health By Law.

By order.

WELLINGTON J. DOWLER, C.M.C.

Victoria, October 1, 1892.

EXTRACTS FROM THE 'CONSOLIDATED HEALTH BY-LAW."

ACCUMULATION OF FILTH.

No person shall permit or suffer the accumulation, so as to be a nuisance, of any offal, filth, refuse, stagnant water, or other offensive matter or thing upon his premises, or on any vacant lot belonging to him, or for the owner or lessee of which he is the agent.

No person shall place on any land or in or upon any street, road, or highway, any manure or other refuse matter, or any dirt or filth which is or is likely to become, a nuisance.

No person shall convey or cause to be conveyed through any street, road, or highway, any night-soil, swill, or other filth or offensive matter dangerous to health, between the hours of six in the morning and twelve in the evening, or at any time except in a proper covered cart or vehicle, so as to prevent slopping or spilling.

Every tenant or occupier of a building shall dispose of all animal and vegetable refuse from such building or on the premises occupied therewith, either by burning the same or by placing it in a proper covered receptacle, the contents of which he shall cause to be removed at least once every week.

No person shall throw into, or leave in or upon, any street, court, square, road, lane, alley, wharf, public enclosure, vacant lot, pond, or body of water, any dead animal, dirt, sawdust, soot, ashes, cinders, shavings, hair, shreds, manure, fish shells, waste water or filth of an kind, or any refuse, animal, or vegetable matter whatever.

DRAINAGE AND PRIVIES.

The owner, lessee, agent, or person having the care of any ground, yard, vacant lot, or other property where stagnant water or other nuisance exists, abutting on any street through which a common sewer shall have been constructed shall cause the same to be effectually drained into such common sewer.

The owner, lessee, agent, or occupier of any building or premises used as a dwelling house, hotel, restaurant, saloon, shop, store, office, factory, wash-house, or otherwise, shall furnish the same with a sufficient drain under ground to carry off all waste or foul water or liquid filth; and no such drain shall empty or discharge into or upon any street, road, or highway, or any open drain thereon, unless in the opinion of the Mayor and Council the same shall not be detrimental to the public health.

All vaults and privies shall be made tight, so that the contents thereof cannot escape therefrom, and as remote from any dwelling, well, or water tank as practicable.

OVERCROWDING.

No person shall let or occupy, or suffer to be occupied, as a dwelling or lodging, any room which—

(a.) Does not contain at all times at least 484 cubic feet of space for each person occupying the same.

(b.) Has not a window made to open in a manner approved by the Medical Health Officer or the Sanitary Inspector; or

(c.) Has not appurtenant to it the use of a water-closet, earth closet or privy, constructed in accordance with the by-laws and regulations of the City.

And every room in which a person passes the night, or is found between midnight and five o'clock in the forenoon, shall be deemed to be occupied as a dwelling or lodging within the meaning of this section.

SLAUGHTER-HOUSES.

No person shall erect, open, or use any slaughter-house within the limits of the City of Victoria.

EVENTION OF THE SPREAD OF DISEASE.

Whenever a person suffering from smallpox, cholera, or any other disease of a malignant character dangerous to the public health, is an inmate of any hotel or boarding house, the keeper, or one of the keepers, of such hotel or boarding-house shall immediately give notice thereof to the Medical Health Officer or the Sanitary Inspector, who shall thereupon take such steps as may be deemed necessary to prevent the spread of such disease.

Every medical practitioner attending or visiting any person who is suffering from smallpox, cholera, or any other disease of a malignant character dangerous to the public health, shall immediately give notice thereof to the Medical Health Officer or the Sanitary Inspector, who shall thereupon take such steps as may be deemed necessary to prevent the spread of such disease.

Any officer of the Corporation may seize, and under the direction of the Medical Health Officer, the Mayor or the Sanitary Inspector, destroy any tainted or unwholesome meat, poultry, fish, or other article of food exposed or offered for sale.

PENALTY.

Every person guilty of an infraction of any of the provisions of this by-law shall, upon conviction thereof, in a summary manner, before the Police Magistrate or any two Justices of the Peace having jurisdiction in the city, forfeit and pay a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars, and costs if ordered; and if such penalty, and costs if ordered, be not paid immediately or within such period as such Police Magistrate or Justices may appoint, the same may be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender, or such offender may be imprisoned, with or without hard labor, for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless such penalty, and costs if ordered, be sooner paid

IRISH HOME RULE.

It is possible that the New York Times may be right in describing as Mr. Gladstone's the Home Rule scheme outlined in to-day's dispatches, but we are very doubtful about the matter, to say the least. The plan as set forth in the dispatch differs very materially from Mr. Gladstone's original scheme, and also from all other ideas of what his scheme is at present. It does not look quite feasible, chiefly for the reason that it provides for no Irish parliament, properly so called. As to Ulster, it is at least open to question whether the Protestants of that province would be any better satisfied, or any better served, under a provincial legislative body, with indirect representation in a Dublin senate, than they would under an Irish parliament of the regulation pattern. Unless we are very much mistaken, the plan now ascribed to Mr. Gladstone will not satisfy either wing of the Irish Nationalist party, and if it fails to command their support it cannot be followed out. Neither would it be apt to commend itself to the Radicals, whose chief aim is to secure a final settlement of the Irish question in order that political and social reforms for the rest of the United Kingdom may be made possible. As this scheme would appear to lack the element of finality they would be apt to object to it. The value of any plan for the establishment of Irish Home Rule depends largely on its acceptability to these various sections, and this one, if it is really Mr. Gladstone's, does not appear likely to meet the test.

DELAYED MAILS.

Victorians have good reason to complain much more than they do about the Canadian mail service to and from their city. If any other city in Canada were as badly treated in this matter it would quickly raise a howl that would waken the Dominion Government to the necessity of an improvement. The Eastern mail that should have arrived here on Sunday evening did not come until this afternoon, and then reached Victoria in company with the mail that should have come from Westminster last evening. To those doing business with eastern Canadian points such delays mean both loss and annoyance. It appears that the mail was missed on Sunday because the train was some hours late and it did not suit the boat people to wait at Vancouver. This mail was taken to Westminster, and the Princess Louise left that place with the two days' mail on board at a fairly early hour yesterday afternoon. It might have been expected that an effort would be made to bring the delayed mail over without any further avoidable detension, but this did not suit the purposes of the C.P.N. Co. The boat was kept in the Fraser river loading salmon, and hence failed to reach Victoria until this afternoon. We suppose it is quite natural that the C.P.N. Co. should fix the movements of its boats to suit its own business rather than the business of the public, but why should the Dominion P. O. Department acquiesce in such an arrangement? The terms on which the subsidy for mail-carrying is given require—or should require—that the mails be forwarded without any avoidable delay, but it happens a good many times in the course of a year that the prosecution of the C.P.N. Company's private business prevents Monday's mail from reaching here until next day. This is decidedly wrong, and the wrong comes to be intolerable when two days' mails are thus delayed. The postal authorities are primarily responsible for this; it is their business to see that the mail carrier does his work properly, and it is to them that the public must look for a remedy. We should like to know if Postoffice Inspector Fletcher has ever taken any steps to correct this abuse? Has he ever stirred up the company or communicated with the Department in regard to the matter? Surely such a delay as we have had this week will not pass unnoticed by the authorities. Or, if it does pass unnoticed, and the offense is repeated, surely the people of this city will not fail to mark their sense of the neglectful treatment they receive. No other city in Canada yields proportionately so large a net postal revenue as Victoria, yet no other is so cavalierly dealt with in the matter of postal facilities. For that matter no other place gives proportionately so high a return of general revenue and gets such scurvy treatment. Victorians are apparently looked upon from Ottawa as patient animals, for whom any sort of treatment is good enough. We are obliged, however, to confess that they have to some extent deserved this judgment by the servility and submissiveness which they and their representatives have shown.

MINING LAW CHANGES.

The letter from Mr. Carpenter is welcomed by the TIMES as a valuable contribution to the discussion on mining law reform. It may be, as the writer seems to insinuate, that the people of Victoria take too little interest in this subject, and in mining matters generally, but the TIMES can certainly plead not guilty to such a charge. We fully recognize the fact that what is best for the miners is best for the province, and for that reason we are anxious to see the correction of abuses and the removal of hindrances of which the miners complain. We do not, as Mr. Carpenter seems to suppose, charge the miners with not knowing what changes they want. They all know what they want, but the trouble is that all do not want the same alterations. Mr. Carpenter instances four reforms which are favored by the men of Slocan, and we have no doubt that if they were effected the mining law would be in much better shape than it is now. But Slocan, though the most important of the mining districts, is not the only one; there are several others both in West and East Kootenay, and at meetings held in these places, as we have pointed out, divergent views have been expressed. There is complete unanimity on two of the points covered by Mr. Carpenter's suggestions, namely, that no claim should be recorded without proof of "mineral in place," and that there should be a better system of defining the location of a claim. It is certainly absurd that two stakes planted in the bush, marking one side of a 1500-foot square, without even a blazed line between them, should be accepted as sufficient definition. We wonder that the Assembly, having practical miners among its members, should have committed so gross an error. As Mr. Carpenter says, the looseness of the present law on this point is a direct encouragement to the "jumper" and a handicap on the honest prospector; and while there is some slight difference of opinion among the miners as to the best way of remedying the defect, there should be no great difficulty in coming to a practical agreement. It is at least universally conceded that an improvement in this respect is absolutely necessary. There is a more striking lack of harmony however, on the two questions of the size of claims and the allowance of extralateral rights. Some of the miners' meetings to which we have referred declared in favor of the present system of claims 1500 feet square, while others called for an amendment reducing the width to 600 feet. Mr. Carpenter favors the latter, and it is probable that a considerable majority of the miners agree with him. There is a similar disagreement as to the mine-worker being allowed to follow his lead in all its dips, spurs and angles. We can see no way of settling these points except by taking the opinion of the majority. At all events, a decided improvement can be effected in the law if the reforms which all the miners call for are made by the Legislature.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is satisfactory to find the Council making a move in the direction of utilizing the work done on the sewerage system. Until house connections are made the money spent on the main sewers is practically a dead investment, while there is more or less danger to the public health involved in the lack of drainage facilities. This danger is less in Victoria than in almost any other city, because of its location and the climatic conditions. Dr. Milne's report as health officer shows that the city is exceptionally healthy, even without the use of a sewerage system. That the death rate for the year past shows a decrease, in face of the smallpox visitation, testifies to the extent of its natural advantages, but it must be supposed that the rate is yet greater than it would be if the sewerage system were made complete. With a proper system in use Victoria should make the record for low death rate.

Dr. Davie, provincial health officer, in a letter to the council read at last night's meeting, frankly admits that he did not know of the existence of a municipal by-law requiring medical men to report cases of smallpox to the municipal health officer, and says that he attended three cases last summer without so reporting. The by-law has been in force since 1886—six years—and Dr. Davie has been practising in Victoria during all that time. In the enforcement of the provincial rules and regulations, Dr. Davie is a martinet, and he would be very likely to look upon a medical man who pleaded ignorance of the provisions of his brother's "orders-in-council" as half knave and all fool. The failure of Dr. Davie to report smallpox cases of which he had charge in the early days of the disease, in all probability, was one of the causes of the disease getting a foothold. At all events, it shows that one doctor cannot claim a monopoly of knowledge in sanitary matters.

THEY CROSS SWORDS.

Mayor Beaven and Ald. Hunter Have Different Ideas of Diction.

Ald. Hunter figuratively crossed swords with Mayor Beaven at the council meeting last night. Mayor Beaven at a former meeting of the civic body undertook to correct the diction of Ald. Hunter. That gentleman objected, but the chair overruled the objection. The cause of the ruffle was the use of the word "sewers" or "sewerage" in clause 7 of a by-law for regulating the construction of house and building connections with the sewers. This particular clause originally read: "Suitable plans and descriptions of the sewerage and plumbing connected with such sewerage of any proposed building shall be submitted to the city engineer . . . . ." Mayor Beaven had maintained that the word "sewers" should be substituted for the word "sewerage." And it had been so substituted.

Last night Ald. Hunter said that he had consulted Worcester and Webster, and both lexicographers sustained him in his opinion. Sewerage was a system of sewers, and Mr. Hunter said that there could be a system of sewerage of a building just as there was a general system of sewerage of a whole city. If they asked for the plans of the "sewers" it would be understood, as referring to the size of the pipes and not to the manner of the laying of the pipes.

Ald. Munn, who had opposed Ald. Hunter, changed front. Ald. Hunter was correct. Mayor Beaven argued that sewerage was not a proper word to use. The word "sewerage," according to the dictionaries, and he had looked it up, meant a combined system of sewerage. But he would change it to suit Ald. Hunter.

Ald. Hunter said it was easy for a man to find flaws, but it was another thing to rectify them. This remark did not apply to Mayor Beaven.

Oh! oh! exclaimed the Mayor and the councillors laughed.

SOME BIG IMPROVEMENTS.

Albion Iron Works Company to Erect New Buildings and Increase Their Plant.

The Company Intend to Place the Works on an Equal Footing With Big Works.

The Albion Iron Works Company intend making some big improvements in their works. What the changes are to be will be decided at a meeting of the company to be held to-morrow. Although the works are at present efficient, the company are not satisfied. They want them to be equal to any on the coast.

In an interview with a TIMES reporter this afternoon, Mr. Alex. Dunsmuir, president of the company, said there were to be some big changes made, but what they were to be he could not say. It was proposed, however, in the first place to improve the buildings. The only one to be left was the pipe shop, built a few years ago. It is to be used as the machine shop. All the other buildings are to be torn down and new ones built in their place. Of course this could not be done all at once, but plans would be prepared for the whole and the work done piece by piece. It is probable that the new buildings will be of brick or stone.

The next consideration will be the machinery. The machines at present in use will certainly be retained, but an almost entirely new plant will be placed in the buildings. The company propose to get the very best and most modern machinery, so that they will be able to successfully handle any work in their line and at the same time compete with the large firms in San Francisco. It is proposed to commence the improvements at once, and when the busy season arrives the company will be better able to cope with the work.

"The report that an English company is to take over the works is without foundation," said Mr. Dunsmuir. He did not think that the capital stock of the company would be increased. It was true that a gentleman of wide experience in the business had proposed to take stock in the company and assume the management, but the directors had not yet considered the proposition.

WHARF OWNERS OBJECT.

Dr. Duncan Prevented from Examining Passengers on the C.P.N. Wharf.

When Dr Geo. Duncan, city health officer, went on the C.P.N. wharf last evening he was told by the wharf officials that Captain John Irving had directed them to order Dr. Duncan off the wharf. The reason they gave was that he was inconveniencing the passengers from the City of Kingston by examining them. Dr. Duncan, of course, submitted to Captain Irving's order and he and Sergt. Levin stationed themselves at the head of the wharf, where he examined the passengers as well as he could.

This morning Dr. Duncan had a conference with Mayor Beaven and the city solicitors, when it was decided to refrain from examining the passengers until the question was settled.

Dr. Duncan, in conversation with a TIMES reporter to-day, said that he thought as city health officer he had a perfect right to examine all passengers, to prevent the introduction of disease.

An alderman, speaking of the matter this afternoon, said that it seemed very queer to him that the wharf owners, who asked the protection of the city police for the wharves, should prevent the city officials from going on the wharves. It was only a short time ago that a letter was received from the owners requesting the city to send officers down when steamers were landing.

H. H. Macdonald and J. P. McLeod, B. A., who were at Wellington last night, say that an explosion was felt in that place at 11:15 p.m., which shook the buildings and alarmed the inhabitants. It was thought at the moment that the Hamilton Powder Co's Works, a few miles distant, had exploded, but Mr. Scott, the agent in this city, had not been advised of any explosion at noon to-day.

THE OPERA SEASON.

The Duff Opera Company Play "A Trip to Africa" to a Splendid House Last Night.

This Evening Mascagni's Great Work "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Trial by Jury."

No better audience in point of numbers respectability and intelligence ever filled the Victoria theatre than that of last evening when the J. C. Duff Opera company presented "A Trip to Africa." The number present is estimated at 1400, and there appeared to be fully that number. The price of admission had been raised for every part of the house. The solid phalanx on the floor of the house represented (with the exception of half-a-dozen or so d.h. friends) $2 a head. The compact array under the balcony $1.50 a head. The great semicircular wall of humanity in the balcony $1 a head, and the tumultuous battalion nearest heaven fifty cents a head. Altogether a house to make the pulses of any manager trip it merrily.

Money has the same value in Victoria as it has in San Francisco and New York; therefore, Victoria money has as much right to expect full value, and no skimping, as 'Frisco or New York. But why is it that Victoria money does not get it? And why not last night? What right has any opera company to come here with an orchestra of six, including the conductor? Is it not a very plain outrage upon such splendid support as Victoria gave them last evening. There would have been excellent cause to complain had the orchestra numbered sixteen instead of six, for even sixteen pieces cannot be expected to decently interpret and ac company any opera worth listening to.

The Musical Courier, a short time ago, took one of the leading opera companies of America severely to task for attempting a piece in their repertoire with sixteen in the orchestra. Then why should a Victoria audience be expected to put up with such a slight as was offered last night?

It simply amounts to this: That Victoria has patiently stood this sort of thing in the past, and until some vigorous protest is uttered it will probably be continued as long as opera companies come here. The Duff Opera Company played with a full orchestra on the Sound; why is Victoria treated to a skeleton orchestra? Better support the company never got. Then why should they single out this and other British Columbia cities to give half value for the good money they get?

It is a shame to attempt even a little light opera like "Die Afrikareise" with six pieces in the orchestra. How on earth the company is going to tackle "Cavalleria Rusticana" with such an outfit of instrumental music is a puzzle. And how on earth any manager would dare to attempt it is more than experienced opera goers, (and Victoria possesses scores of them,) can understand.

But be it remembered, the musicians composing the orchestra are excellent performers, there is no doubt about that; but their woful lack of numbers overwhelmingly counteracts their individual excellence.

Just so soon as the more ambitious theatrical and operatic companies who condescend to visit Victoria come to understand that this is not a little country town where "anything" can be palmed off and eagerly swallowed, the better for their success here. Victoria is a cosmopolitan city, her population including a very large proportion of people who have lived in the great centres of population all over the globe, and who have seen the best of everything in the amusement line. It is therefore egregious folly to come here with half-learned lessons, half orchestras and half choruses and expect shekels and applause.

To attempt an explanation or synopsis of such a well-worn piece as "A Trip to Africa" at this date would be about as apropos as an exegesis of Genesis or Deuteronomy. Miss Helen Dertram as Titania showed that she is a clever girl with a pretty face, fine figure and fetching little voice. Undoubtedly the best voice in the company is Miss Villa Knox's, whose Tessa was very well done. The numerous recalls Miss Knox received amply proved her favor with the audience. Mr. J. H. Ryley is a very amusing comedian, and although rather inclined to lapse into horse play here and there, was still very laughable in his antics and speeches. Miss Helen von Doenhoff's fine voice sounded strangely coming from such a ludicrous and grotesque make-up. She was one of the favorites of the evening. The part of Miradillo was spiritedly maintained by Mr. J. J. Raffael, while the part of Antarsid found an acceptable interpreter in Mr. Charles Bassett. Mr. Bassett's voice is a very pleasing one, though not powerful. Mr. William Schuster as the Muezzin showed that he possessed the strongest voice in the company, and by no means the most unmusical. The chorus was well-trained and well balanced, and did passing well, considering the deficiency of numbers.

Every time the curtain went up a polar draught swept down upon the devoted audience and produced a chorus of nasal music that deserved but did not receive any applause. Cannot this cardinal defect in the Victoria theatre be remedied? It really seems as though the roof were off and some patent machine were pumping atmospheric icebergs into the theatre. The complaint of a correspondent in the morning paper regarding the exits is also well taken.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Trial by Jury" are the attractions for this evening.

IS IT A "FEELER?"

Mate James, of the Ganges, Takes Action for Wages—Charges of Rotten Rigging.

The suit of second mate J. H. James of the bark River Ganges, to be heard to-morrow (Wednesday) morning is a test case. James sues for wages due and asks to be liberated from service on the River Ganges. The allegation is that the shipment papers are irregular. If James succeeds it is an open secret that the rest of the crew will institute similar action.

Capt. Budge, of the River Ganges, was asked what defence he would offer. He answered: "I have engaged Mr. Mills as my lawyer, and I am advised to go on with the case. I was personally favorably inclined to pay off the whole of the crew. I know what they want. They can earn better pay on the Pacific coast than they receive as sailors. And they wish to get clear of their signed articles. They do not want to desert the ship, but prefer to sue and get a little money in their pockets. Their wages will not properly be coming to them till we again reach a port in the British Isles."

"Have you anything to say against the charges that the rigging was rotten and that several accidents to sailors occurred on that account?"

"The bark speaks for itself. I am prepared at any time to have an enquiry into the seaworthiness of the Ganges. If she were not all right do you think we should have weathered, without mishap, the storm experienced off Cape Flattery? It is an easy matter to bring up charges. I can find plenty of rotten ends of rope, but that does not prove that these rotten pieces have been part of the rigging. I hear that the crew are going to bring the scales into town to prove that I cheated them in their rations. I am willing that the scales should be produced. Credence will then be placed on my story."

The prosecutor claims that the scales have been tested by an expert and found wanting. There is a shortage of weight of one pound in thirty. Portions of the alleged rigging will be produced, and there may be stories told of how several sailors met with accidents through defective ropes.

The Madd(en)ing Crowd.

An energetic policeman could find work to do when the Victoria Theatre audience is coming out, by keeping the earlier contingents of the crowd moving. Some of those persons do not seem to think they are doing anything improper by standing in solid knots of half a dozen or so as soon as they reach the sidewalk directly in front of the entrance and beginning animated discussion of the merits or otherwise of the play. Their ideas in this respect are not at all shared by the hundreds who are endeavoring to crowd past them and get home. The police ought to be able to put a stop to the senseless practice above-mentioned. It is not allowed anywhere else, and it is a most decided nuisance.

CARLYLE'S CHELSEA HOME.

A London Suburb Replete with Memories of Kings, Courtiers, Statesmen and Artists.

Special Correspondence of the TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A good, sweet book could be written about the folk who have loved and known old Chelsea, whom we have known and loved for what they did for the world.

Many years ago I saw one of these folk on a London bus and had a good hour's study of him as a curious character without knowing who he was. He first attracted my attention by his generally disheveled and thrown together appearance. When he entered the bus he held a copy of the London Times in one hand and dragged a very old bit of a traveling rug in the other. He slapped the latter over his knees as he sat down, glared at the passengers savagely, and immediately closed his eyes and began a peculiar motion of his mouth that seemed like a nervous chewing of his nether lip.

He was a scraggy and it then seemed to me an ill kempt man, out of sorts with all the world. I mentally endeavored to place him. Perhaps he is some one of those seedy old clerks so wondrously pictured by Dickens, thought I. He may be a miserly old bachelor who daily tumbles out of his lodgings and into his work and then back again, never knowing change, sleeping in his clothing, mummied to everything on earth but his ledgers and his desk. If he have a wife and family, he cuffs the children, warns the cook, abuses the housemaid and "blows up" his wife before leaving his habitation, and this particular morning he has made them understand who is master with greater vehemence than usual.

Pretty soon he seemed to awake with a start, glared again at his fellow passengers, and giving his bony knees a vicious twist away from proximity to an elderly fat woman who sat beside him, plunged into his paper as though he had so far overlooked his duty of discovering, capturing and punishing some sort of sedition within. Sure enough it was there. He scanned the editorial page a moment, smashed the paper together with his knuckly hands, dropped it upon the bus floor, and pawing it back beneath his feet for some time gave it a nervous kind of pounding which plainly told his sentiments for the balderdash he had discovered. Then he fell to chewing again, with his eyes quite closed, and shortly awoke with a start, to lunge toward the door and soundly berate the conductor for carrying him past his destination. I could not hear all of this scolding, but it brought traffic on the Strand to a standstill, and then the scraggy, hairy, tumbled up, loose jointed old man disappeared among the cabs and busses, a tangible, irascible Altercation with a Scotch dialect, prompting from drivers as he passed the choicest blackguard quips and quirks that roll from London drivers' ready tongues.

The incident left a smile on nearly every face in the omnibus. A pleasant faced man sitting beside me, noticing my look of inquiry, and rightly judging my inquisitiveness, kindly solved the mystery. "My dear sir," he said with almost an air of pride, "he's a brave literary man, that. He wasn't born in England, but he's the biggest man in it. When you get back to America you can tell the Yankees you've seen old Thomas Carlyle!"

I never saw him again. But the London incident of long ago made me a student of Carlyle—one of the most difficult tasks of my life, and from much reading after the sturdy old barrator in philosophy and religion, many pilgrimages to his birth and burial place up there in dreary Ecclefechan, and to other British localities which his strange personality and genius made something like shrines, I have come to love his memory, and especially to have an affection for the place where for half a lifetime he struggled, contended, railed, assaulted, defended, suffered and repented in his humble and imperial, niggardly and noble career.

That place is Chelsea. It is London now. You cannot find a break in all the great masses of solid structures from the densest part of the borough out to old Chelsea and for many miles beyond. Yet the Chelsea region is still most charmingly distinct. You know insensibly when you come to it. You feel, without being told, that you have crossed its boundaries on leaving it. Without participating in its memories, knowing none of its history, if you were set down within it, its lovely, leafy, somnolent air has the very spirit and hush of lingering noble presences.

In the very heart of this pleasantest of all London outer districts Thomas and Jane Welsh Carlyle literally battled along together from the 10th day of October, 1834, until Mrs. Carlyle's sad and strange death in her brougham in Hyde Park in April, 1866. The lonely old soul that was left remained, rather than lived, in the same house to the end, in 1881. And I somehow believe that the forty-seven years' staying of the sage of Ecclefechan in No. 5 Great Cheyne Row has thrown more of a poetic glamour over old Chelsea than all the other famous and great who have come and tarried and gone.

Materially Sir Thomas More originally made Chelsea. Carlyle rounds out its fame. Vast fields of history and romance lie between. This "pore house in Chelchith," as the ancient records speak of the home of Sir Thomas More, was not so humble a habitation after all. It had a great porch, many fine windows, dozens of gables, a pretty tower, splendid gardens for the time, and besides housing the happiest family living in England in the Sixteenth century was so attractive a place, though then far away from London, that Queen Mary was "moved to purchase it," the garrulous Erasmus found it a hospitable retreat, and King Henry VIII often came up the Thames in his royal barge to debark and stroll to this first old Chelsea mansion, with his arm lovingly around the neck of More, which his headman's ax severed one July morning a little later on.

Lying along the northern bank of the Thames, to the west of the city, Chelsea proper may be said to begin on the east at the famous Chelsea Hospital for British pensioners. The magnificent Thames embankment forms the shore edge here, and near the Botanic gardens becomes Cheyne Walk, which continues a mile or so to Battersea Bridge. In this two or three miles distance, about the center of which is the Carlyle neighborhood, and extending back from the river to the depth of a mile or more, there are wondrously quaint old structures, clumps of ancient cottages covered with vines and imbedded in greenery; Elizabethan mansions by the score, with monstrous chimneys and gray old gables; winding lanes leading from the Thames, where once were fine water stairs and picturesque fisher huts; bits of venerable park and moldy gardens overshadowed by prim modern rows, where the aristocracy have crowded in upon the older haunts of literature and art, and cobwebbed inns innumerable.

Chelsea Hospital itself is a world of memories, not only of British history afield, but of the time of Charles II, of old King James' College, of Sir Stephen Fox, and of wayward though kind hearted Nell Gwynne. And as to the pensioners themselves, Chelsea would hardly be without them. Straggling along its shady thoroughfares, sitting bent and silent on sunny benches, leaning against wimpling fountains or vases and statues, resting as composedly as house owners on steps and in vestibules, or stumping gravely along with orders to this or that servant, as if long habit had given them supervisory rights over the daily affairs of residents, they irresistibly suggest bevies of croaking cockatoos turned loose in park and garden, each one querulously harping upon some fancied grievance or delight.

At the western side of the hospital still stands Sir Robert Walpole's house, almost precisely as it stood when he all but ruled England through the two Georges, First and Second. It is now a portion of the hospital infirmary. It was to this old red brick mansion that Walpole's rival, Bolingbroke, came to dine and half choked for his choler; where Swift and Gay came to get material for satire, and where Pope came with scandal of his past amours and probably to beg for assistance in others.

Not far from the Hospital, over in the northeast corner of Chelsea, is a little green oval like a pretty emerald lozenge, around which crowd some very ancient two story brick houses. The windows are little, the panes are little, the steps, scrapers and knockers are little, but always bright and clean, and it seems that every face you see at the tiny panes is little and snappy and old, like all else in this venerable Hans Place. At one of these bits of habitations, precisely like all the rest, was born the poetess L. E. L. But two doors away, in another box of a house, she went to school. Her schoolfellows were the East Indian writer, Miss Roberts, and Lady Caroline Lamb. Years after here were also educated other famous women—Lady Bulwer, Miss Mitford and that best and tenderest of all writers upon Ireland, Mrs. S. C. Hall.

The one time famous Cremorne Gardens at the western edge of Chelsea have special interest to Americans. A granddaughter of William Penn, named Philadelphia from the city of her birth, became the second wife of Viscount Cremorne. Outliving her husband, she inherited the beautiful grounds once known as "Chelsea Farm." Granville Penn, once lord of the Stoke Poges Manor, where Gray lived and wrote the "Elegy," fell heir to the property and sold it to the Cremorne Gardens corporation. Wicked enough it grew in time. Decorous associations retrieved it, and an innocent nursery garden now veils its unhallowed site and memories.

At least three ancient taverns in the neighborhood have peculiar old time interest. Two, one at the western and one at the eastern edge of the parish, are directly associated with Nell Gwynne. That to the west was built by Charles II as a home for his favorite. It was from the windows of this house, now a resort of Chelsea pensioners, that Nell's eyes looked in upon the then fine meadows of King James' college, in the dream when she saw the beautiful palace rise with its thousand chambers out of which "divers many old and worn-out soldier men" came and cried, "God bless King Charles!" which led to the merciful founding of the splendid Hospital.

The other associated with the fame of the pretty orange girl is a sedate old rookery at the western side of Chelsea. It is called the "Nell Gwynne Tavern," and many a rare tradition of Charles' companion lingers about the mellow old place. Another curious tavern still in existence is the Prince of Wales, at the corner of Lawrence street and Justice Walk, but a square's distance from the old Carlyle home in Great Cheyne Row. Chelsea was once made known through the artistic world for its famous china. For the forty years from 1745 its china works, which stood on the site of the Prince of Wales, turned out a product equal to that of Sèvres. In the cellars of the inn you can see the remains of the ovens and baking rooms just as they were abandoned. Dr. Samuel Johnson was suddenly possessed of the idea that he could as easily make china as a dictionary, and the doughty old scholar, but unskilled native workman, for a long time came here daily to spoil good material, his faithful housekeeper trudging after him with a huge basket containing his daily food.

In Great Cheyne Row Smollett lived, long before Carlyle came, and here he wrote "Ferdinand Count Fathom" and finished Hume's "History of England," while George Eliot died in a house near Carlyle's in the same modest little thoroughfare. Chelsea Old Church, one of the sweetest old places in London, overlooks the Thames but a few rods distant. Here you will find the black memorial slab of Sir Thomas More. Lady Dacre, Lady Jane Cheyne and the Duchess of Northumberland, three of Chelsea's former grand ladies, lie beneath monuments within the church, while Charles, George and Henry Kingsley once lived in its rectory with their father, who had received the "living" from Lord Cadogan.

In Cheyne Walk along the river side lived Turner, the painter. Rosetti lived and sang here among his birds and flowers. Leigh Hunt's Gipsylike home, of which Carlyle has left inimitable description, was just around the corner from Great Cheyne Row. Queen Elizabeth used to visit the Earl of Shrewsbury at Shrewsbury House, just back of Cheyne Walk. The poet George Herbert dwelt in the same neighborhood, and at a little barber shop, coffee house and quaint museum called "Don Saltero's" by the wits of the time in honor of its grave nobody proprietor, one Salt, who "brewed divine coffee and shaved with equal terror," Richard Cromwell, Steele and Addison and Benjamin Franklin, who worked in a painting shop in Bartholomew Close near by, came to get shaved and to loiter over their coffee, "where the Literati then sat in council."

Long and pleasant is one's loitering here. If you come many days or but one, an endless host of wraiths of worthies start up unbidden in your wanderings. If once or many times you depart you will ever insensibly be drawn at parting to the gray old habitations of Great Cheyne Row. The windows of all overlook the turbulent river, darkening Battersea at its farther shore, and the pleasant villages upon the hills of Surrey beyond. At a window of one—it matters not who lives there now—your fancy cannot but see a shaggy, sturdy, haggard face. Its gray, defiant but sorrowful eyes are lifted across the turbulent river, and rest beyond the hills upon that material and spiritual Light that somewhere ever brings the blessed morning time.

THE SEWERS MAY BE USED.

A Resolution for Temporary Pending Permanent Connections.

Birdcage Walk and Queen's Avenue Will Be Opened—Hapson Will Not Starve.

At 8.05 o'clock last night, there was a quorum of the city council. Present: Mayor Beaven, Aldermen McKillican, Hall, Bragg, Baker, Munn, Lovell, Hunter and Humber.

The minutes were read, found correct, and adopted.

TEMPORARY SEWER CONNECTIONS.

Mayor Beaven offered a resolution on temporary sewer connections for the consideration of the council. The resolution was as follows:

Resolved,—That pending the passage of a by-law to assess, levy and collect by means of a special rate, the cost of constructing branch sewers to connect real property with a common or main sewer, and for connecting buildings with such branch sewers and for making all necessary house or building connections with such sewer:

That persons wishing to construct branch sewers to connect with main or or common sewers now constructed and connect houses or buildings with such branch sewers, may be permitted to do so by making application in a form to be prepared by the city engineer and by depositing with that officer the amount of cash which he estimate the cost of supervision of the work will be. If permission is granted by the city engineer, the work is to be undertaken and paid for by the applicant, but is to be performed under instruction, and to the entire satisfaction and under full control of the city engineer.

No house or other building to be connected with a branch, main or common sewer without the consent of the city engineer.

Ald. Lovell wanted to know if it were proposed to refund the money to persons who connect.

Mayor Beaven said no binding condition could be made. It would remain with the council. There was a want of this kind and the resolution would cover it.

Ald. Munn contended that notice of the resolution should have been given.

Mayor Beaven replied that clause 21 section B of the Municipal act dispensed with notice.

Ald. Hall thought it was a good resolution. It would make the main sewer useful.

Ald McKillican moved its adoption and Ald. Hall seconded. The resolution was carried.

A letter from James Angus asked that a gutter be built at Belcher and Moss streets. Referred to street committee.

H. A. Biers and others petitioned that Esquimalt street from the Craigflower road to the city boundary be opened up, and asking the cost and what time the council would give for the repayment of such work. The clerk was instructed to notify the petitioners that the matter was under consideration, and that it would be taken up as soon as the report of the engineer and the assessor was in.

WILL BE OPENED UP.

City Assessor Northcott reported that the petition for opening up Birdcage Walk was signed by 31 ratepayers, representing a property value of $210,610. Petitioners against, 17; value of property represented, $71,800. For opening up of Queen's avenue ratepayers. Value of property represented, $15,800. Against, 2. Property value, $7800. The requisite valuation is secured for opening both thoroughfares.

"COME TO TIME."

Captain George Rudlin asked the council to "come to time" on the proposed purchase of his property at Spring Ridge. He wanted the "deal" closed or "called off." Mayor Beaven said $2600 had been set aside. That was all that had been done. Ald. Humber said that the property was not worth $2000. Rudlin had offered to take $1500, but he had been told to tack on $500. The widening of the street would materially benefit Captain Rudlin's property. The captain ought to give the property. Why should View street be widened under the local improvement act and Captain Rudlin be given money for a lot on the next street, Johnson street? The local improvement act should apply all around.

Ald. Bragg said the money was placed on special deposit by a former council and should be used for the purpose appropriated.

Mayor Beaven said the council could expend it how they pleased.

Ald. McKillican moved that the matter be referred to the finance committee to see Captain Rudlin, Mr. Woodley and Mr. Norris and see if the right of way cannot be secured through the three properties for the appropriated sum, $3000. Carried.

DR. MILNE'S HEALTH REPORT.

Dr. Milne sent in his annual report as health officer. During the year there were 239 deaths compared with 346 last year. There were 112 cases of smallpox and 22 deaths. The number of cases of typhoid fever and other infectious diseases was very few for a city with the population of Victoria. The sanitary condition of the city was better than in former years, and the city on the whole was cleanly. The report suggested that either the limits of Chinatown be enlarged or another quarter be given the Celestials. Ten thousand persons had been vaccinated and no serious results had come under his observation. The report was ordered printed in the annual statements of the council.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

Dr. Davie wrote taking to task Dr. Milne. Dr. Davie's letter was materially the same as the interview published in the TIMES. The letter charged negligence on the part of Dr. Milne, in not instructing medical men, and asked why should smallpox be reported when diphtheria and scarlet fever were not.

H. E. Harte, of Montreal, formerly of Victoria, wanted to furnish Victoria with supplies. He could furnish them cheaply. Mayor Beaven said it was poor policy to go outside the province. Received.

THE COLD CHARITY OF THE WORLD.

Provincial Secretary Baker called attention to the case of James Hapson, consumptive. Hapson had been discharged from the Jubilee Hospital as incurable, and unless he was cared for he would starve. The Provincial Government offered to pay part.

Mayor Beaven said he might be admitted to the Old Men's Home. Ald. Munn said Hopson could not be sent there. Consumption was an infectious disease and no person suffering from an infectious disease could be admitted to the Home.

Ald. Humber asked what the hospital was for?

Mayor Beaven told Ald. Humber not to ask difficult questions. Ald. Humber did not see what hospitals were for unless for the sick. It was a crying shame to turn out a dying man to the mercy of the world. Hopson should be cared for if it took every cent the corporation had.

Ald. Munn echoed the sentiments of Ald. Humber. There was no accommodation or medical attendance at the Old Men's Home. And the food was not suited for consumptives.

Referred to the mayor and finance committee to act.

THEY'LL "STICK TO" IT.

From Secretary Bainbridge of the British Columbia Pottery and Terra Cotta Co., asking that the $22,762 on deposit for carrying out of contract be refunded. The $7000 worth of pipes on hand were sufficient security. Ald. Lovell verbally reported that the city solicitors had advised the city to "stick to" the money. The verbal report was not thought proper, and the finance committee were instructed to report in writing.

A report was received from the city engineer and city assessor on the opening up of Montreal avenue from Cook street to Blackwood ssreet. Adopted.

"LET THERE BE LIGHT!"

The street lighting committee reported the engaging of an electric light trimmer at $60 a month. Adopted. Ald. Humber said more trimmers would be needed. More light was wanted. When he was chairman of the electric light committee there was good light. They did not then depend upon the moon. People wanted a light to go to church. Laughter and a voice "Do you go often?"

LICENSED PLUMBERS.

The council went into committee of the whole on the licensed plumbers' by-law. Ald. Hunter moved for the insertion of a clause providing for the cancellation of licenses in case of "scamping." It would be too expensive to have an examining board.

Ald. Humber wanted a competent person appointed as examiner to give a certificate in the first place. The city engineer was a good man, but he was not a plumber.

Ald. Baker wanted another competent man to act with the city engineer in granting or cancelling certificates of license.

Mayor Beaven said the city engineer by the by-law had only to report to the council who could cancel the license. He did not see how the council could properly act. They did not know anything about plumbing.

Ald. Hunter said the city engineer would have a sanitary engineer under him, and this man would be a competent plumber. The proposed insertion was adopted. The committee rose and reported.

The by-law was deferred for final passage till next meeting.

WHO WAS RIGHT?

The council went into committee of the whole on a by-law to regulate the the construction of house and building connections with the public sewers. A question arose whether the storm water could be run into the sewers.

Ald. Hunter said that the storm water could run into the sewers. Ald. Humber wanted to know why the need of the $100,000 surface drainage by-law, if the storm water could be carried off by the sewers. The by-law was finally reported complete with amendment. Third reading deferred.

Council adjourned at 10:30 p.m.

The statement that the schooner Halcyon was bought to replace the schooner E. B. Marvin in the fleet of E. B. Marvin & Co. is hardly correct. The firm owns both of the schooners, having bought the Marvin at auction.

MR. WALDECK OF 'FRISCO.

Proceedings for His Extradition in the Supreme Court

The extradition case against Florian L. Waldeck, alleged embezzler, was again before the Supreme Court this afternoon. Lawyer Mills, for the prosecution, stated that if the evidence was not thought sufficient by the court to grant extradition papers, he would ask for a further adjournment for the attendance of Mr. Khan, the alleged victim.

Chief Sheppard told of receiving instructions to arrest Waldeck. He had found Waldeck at the Wilson house, but three weeks ago Saturday night, when he had secured the warrant and went to arrest, him Waldeck had fled. The city was scoured on Saturday and Sunday, but there was no trace of Waldeck. Chief Sheppard left the witness box and took a seat in the court.

Justice Crease asked him to stand. Justice Crease said "You are still on your oath, Mr. Sheppard. Have you any reason to believe that any one else knew of the issuing of the warrant?"

The reply was in the affirmative. This reply may have a material bearing in subsequent proceedings. It proves that Chief Sheppard has his eye on the person who assisted Waldeck in his escape.

Sergt. Walker told the story of the arrest. Waldeck acknowledged his identity. His name was spelt wrongly in the warrant. The warrant calls him Waudeck. Waldeck told witness if he had used his own plans he would have succeeded in escaping. If he ever got to Montreal, he never would have been caught. Waldeck "made up" as a good railroad navvy, and a dirty one at that.

Justice Crease asked if Waldeck told witness whose plans of escape he followed.

"No," was the reply. In Victoria before his flight he wore a tall silk hat and was attired in good clothing. When arrested he wore a pair of greasy overalls, a torn oilcloth and a pair of shantyman's boots. Waldeck stated that he had led a fast life, but if he got out of this difficulty he would turn over a new leaf. The newspapers had lied about him. The woman he was living with was his wife. He had incurred hatred because he married her. She was an Englishwoman and he was a Jew. The court asked was the woman in Victoria? Sergt. Walker replied that she had returned to San Francisco.

Detective Anthony, of San Francisco, swore to knowing Waldeck for three months. He was a book-keeper for the wholesale cigar house of G. Khan & Co., of San Francisco. Waldeck bore a good reputation.

Waldeck told witness that he did not commit forgery nor embezzle. His offence was a breach of trust. Here Lawyer Irving turned to Waldeck and uttered some words to him. Waldeck shook his head. Detective Anthony tracked Waldeck and the woman who was with him to the railway station. He had a photograph of the woman and the railway officials recognized her as the woman who was with Waldeck. Affidavits from San Francisco were produced by witness but the court stated that they would not be taken in evidence on the extradition proceedings.

William Tuck, proprietor of the Wilson House, swore that Waldeck registered at the Wilson, Nov. 3rd, as Mr. Wolffe. He paid in advance. He afterwards changed his room. The afternoon of Tuesday, November 8th, two men, whom witness soon afterwards learned were Detectives Miller and Bloomfield, came to the Wilson and asked for Wolffe. A young man named Burd was also in the company of Wolffe (Waldeck). The case is in progress.

Aluminium Racing Shells.

New York World.]

Aluminium is now being used for the building of racing shells with the best of results, and it is likely to take the place of cedar as a material for this purpose. Dan Galanaugh, the noted coach of the Vespers of Philadelphia, and who was also employed in that capacity for a while last season with the Tritons of Newark, was the first man to build a shell of aluminium less than a year ago. Through making careful trials and experiments since then he has come to the conclusion that this wonderful metal will revolutionize boat racing.

His long experience as a builder of cedar shells aided him materially in making the aluminium craft practicable. Very few persons are aware that the double scull in which Hosmer and Gaudaur defeated Hanlan and O'Connor for the world's championship was built of aluminium by Galanaugh. In this race the record was smashed for the distance by the winners.

Galanaugh built a four-oared shell of aluminium for the Fairmount Rowing Club of Philadelphia, and that club's crack four lowered the record over the Schuylkill River course by nine seconds. An eight-oared shell of aluminum is now on the stocks at Galanaugh's shop in the Quaker City, it being the first of its kind ever made.

The aluminium is in one piece about a nineteenth of an inch thick, and the weight will be nearly fifty pounds less than a cedar boat. It is probable that the boat will be purchased by a local club. Meanwhile the oarsmen are awaiting the result with much interest.
